Individual Notes:

Carrera Red overall is a little timid to start. She will adjust very well on her own. She is also a bit immature, but this does not affect the results of this test. She does show some stress in new situations, around new people and circumstances typically considered stressful. She does react appropriately to new sites and sounds, including those that should be considered startling. Red is curious and investigative. She has a good memory, focus, and problem-solving abilities average to her age and stage of development. She has good motivations for interaction, food and toys at fairly equal and balance levels. Red is socially appropriate in her interactions with one another, other dogs, and with cats, she is also socially appropriate in her interactions with people. She is rarely vocal and has excellent bite inhibition, if she uses her mouth to initiate or engage and play. Red has no red flags and show no possessiveness. She has mid-level energy. Overall the Carrera litter is fairly consistent with very few differences between individuals. They are curious, social, personable, and affectionate. They are content to explore and play on their own, while still being engaging. These puppies are well balanced, and should adapt well into most any home, as long as not overwhelmed they do need time to adjust to new situations
