Lainey Girls Temperament Overview:

The Lainey litter was initially a little timid and needed time to adjust to new situations. They showed some stress in new environments, particularly around unfamiliar people and circumstances typically considered stressful. However, they were curious and investigated new sights and sounds, including those that might be considered startling. While they did startle, they recovered quickly and independently. These puppies demonstrated good memory, focus, and problem-solving abilities appropriate for their age and stage of development. They have excellent motivation for interaction, as well as strong motivation for food and toys.

Socially, the puppies were appropriate in their interactions—with one another, with cats, and with other dogs. They were also socially appropriate with people. They rarely used their mouths to initiate or engage in play and were rarely vocal. They were comfortable with and tolerant of handling and restraint. No red flags were observed, and they did not show signs of possessiveness. These puppies were eager, engaging, and fairly consistent overall, with only very subtle differences between individuals.
