Presleigh Litter Temperament Overview:

The Presleigh litter is slightly immature in development, though this does not affect the results of the temperament test. These puppies are confident and self-assured. While a few may need a little time to adjust to new situations, they settle in quickly and respond appropriately to change. They show little to no stress in new environments, around unfamiliar people, or in circumstances typically considered stressful.

They are curious and investigative when exposed to new sights and sounds, including those that might be considered startling. At this age, they demonstrate very good memory, focus, and problem-solving abilities—above average for their stage of development. They also have strong motivation for interaction and food, with a healthy interest in toys.

Socially, they are appropriate with one another, with cats, with other dogs, and with people. They rarely use their mouths to initiate or engage in play and exhibit excellent bite inhibition when they do. These puppies are also rarely vocal, show no red flags, and display no signs of possessiveness.

Overall, this is a very happy, social, eager, and engaging litter. They are gentle, sweet, loving, and many of the puppies show good potential for therapy work
