Helena Litter Temperament Overview:

The Helena litter overall needs just a little extra time to adjust in new situations, but they do settle in well on their own when allowed. These puppies may show a touch of stress around new people or in circumstances typically considered stressful, but they recover quickly and appropriately. They are curious and investigative, even with sights and sounds that could be considered startling. Their memory, focus, and problem-solving abilities are right on track for their age and stage of development.

These puppies have balanced motivations for food, toys, and interaction, showing good engagement across the board. They are socially appropriate in their interactions with one another, with cats, and with other dogs. With people, they are also appropriate—rarely using their mouths to initiate or engage in play (except for Pink, who does but very gently). Their bite inhibition is excellent, and they are rarely vocal.

This litter shows no possessiveness or red flags, and all are comfortable and tolerant of handling and restraint. Their naturally timid nature makes them very gentle and respectful, and they have a sweet, cuddly side. Overall, the impression of this litter is that they are silly, playful, and happy puppies who simply need a minute to adjust before shining in new situations.
