Holland Litter Temperament Overview:

The Holland litter is confident and self-assured overall. They show no stress in new situations, whether around new people or in environments typically considered stressful. These puppies react appropriately to new sights and sounds, displaying curiosity and investigation—even toward stimuli that might be considered startling. Their memory, focus, and problem-solving abilities are above average for their age and stage of development.

They show excellent motivation for interaction and good motivation for food and toys. Socially, they are appropriate in their interactions with one another, as well as with cats and other dogs. They are also appropriate and affectionate in their interactions with people. While they may use their mouths somewhat to initiate or engage in play, their bite inhibition is excellent. None of the puppies show red flags or possessiveness, and vocalization is rare in this litter.

Overall, the Holland litter is consistent, well balanced, sweet, social, and confident. Their calm confidence and focus make them excellent companions, and several display wonderful potential for therapy or emotional support work.
