Together, The Rosie litter has a wonderfully confident and self-assured temperament overall. These puppies transition beautifully into new environments and around new people, showing little to no stress even in situations that are typically considered challenging. They respond appropriately to new sights and sounds—including those that may be sudden or startling—and maintain a calm, thoughtful demeanor. Their motivation for interaction is excellent, and they show great enthusiasm for both toys and food. As a whole, their focus, memory, and problem-solving abilities are notably strong and above average for their developmental stage.

Socially, these puppies shine. They interact appropriately with one another, with cats and other dogs, and with people of all ages. They rarely use their mouths to initiate or engage in play unless otherwise noted, and when they do, they demonstrate excellent bite inhibition. No red flags were observed, and none of the puppies showed any signs of possessiveness. Each puppy is comfortable with handling and restraint and tolerates it with ease, making them an excellent fit for families.

Overall, this litter is wonderfully consistent in temperament. Every puppy shows the kind of gentle confidence, people-oriented sweetness, and emotional stability that make them strong candidates for future therapy work and exceptional companions in a wide range of homes.
