Litter Temperament Overview:

The Sage litter is a confident, intelligent, and highly consistent group that reflects the strength of this repeat pairing. These puppies are self-assured and show little to no stress in new environments, around new people, or in unfamiliar situations. They are naturally curious and investigative, with strong problem-solving ability, focus, and excellent motivation for both food and toys.

Socially, they are very appropriate with one another, as well as with people and other animals. They are tolerant of handling, rarely vocal, and show excellent bite inhibition with no concerning behaviors or red flags. This litter is especially known for being affectionate, eager to please, and naturally people-oriented.

Overall energy levels sit slightly above mid-moderate, but do not feel overwhelming due to their size and ability to settle. These puppies are very similar overall, with bubbly, happy personalities and strong engagement. Many in this litter show nice potential for therapy or emotional support roles, given their social confidence, adaptability, and desire to connect.

This is a repeat breeding, allowing us to rely on established temperament data from the previous Sage litter. That group was confident and self-assured, showing no stress in new situations—whether around unfamiliar people or in environments typically considered challenging. They approached new sights and sounds, including those that might be startling, with curiosity and an investigative mindset.

The puppies demonstrated above-average memory, focus, and problem-solving abilities for their age and stage of development. They showed excellent motivation for interaction, along with strong drive for food and toys, making them highly engaging and responsive. Socially, they were appropriate and well-mannered with one another, as well as with cats, other dogs, and people. Mouth use during play was minimal, paired with excellent bite inhibition, and vocalization was rare. No red flags or possessive behaviors were observed across the litter.

All puppies were comfortable with handling and restraint, with many actively seeking out affection and interaction. As a group, they were very consistent—loving, affectionate, and eager to please. Their calm, intuitive nature combined with strong social confidence made many of them excellent candidates for therapy or service work.

Together, this pairing has proven to consistently produce well-balanced, confident, and highly people-oriented puppies. With their intelligence, adaptability, and gentle, engaging temperaments, these puppies are expected to transition seamlessly into a wide variety of home environments and thrive as both companions and potential working dogs.
