Fendi Litter Temperament Overview:

Fendi and Archer produced exactly the kind of litter we hoped to see from this pairing. Fendi is outgoing, confident, sweet, focused, and highly engaged—a beautiful representation of the classic Smeraglia Goldendoodle in both temperament and appearance. Archer brings many of those same qualities with an especially balanced, easygoing side. He is outgoing and playful while also being affectionate, interactive, and a bit of a snuggler.

Their puppies are a beautifully balanced, gentle, affectionate, confident, and personable group. Across the litter, they showed a natural people preference, great engagement, and excellent tolerance with handling. They are very easygoing puppies overall with a true mid-level energy—playful and interactive when there is something to engage with, while still having a relaxed, comfortable side.

This litter also showed good early therapy potential across the board. They are intelligent, people-oriented babies who enjoy connection and engagement, while their naturally easygoing demeanor lends itself especially well to companionship and therapy-type qualities. They are not puppies who need constant activity; they have a lovely ability to participate when something is happening and relax when life is quieter.

A few of the puppies appreciate a brief moment to take in a completely new situation before fully settling in, while others step into new environments more immediately. Once comfortable, the litter is consistently gentle, affectionate, confident, personable, and engaging. Those subtle differences simply help us make the best individual family match.

These puppies are DNA clear and genetic non-sheds, with fading expected as their coats mature.
